

Adam Moulder, Jessica Ridgewell,
Theo Leonard, Laurie Mill-Zutshi
&

UEA DramaSoc Presents...

Teachers

by John Godber

Lighting

Jonathon Armbruster

Sound

Kathryn Walton

Many Thanks to:

Lucy Bullen, Vanessa Bowen, Tristan Cass,
Kieran Cornwell, Jon Hyde, Matt Meen, Nigel
Shed, Chiara Swaine, and The DramaSoc
Committee

John Kearns (Salty)

D

John has applied himself poorly this term. He can't seem to grasp the concept of paying attention in class at all. Too much time is spent staring off into space, and when he does return to planet Earth, it is generally helpful to remember to deodorise.

Toril Cooper (Gail)

C⁺

Toril tries her best. But, alas, she can't help herself. The minute a boy walks past, she's off, chasing him with reckless abandon. This is a shame. Please try and focus properly Ms. Cooper.

Katie Nicholls (Hobby)

B-

Katie needs to ask herself one question before she returns to school next term. Do I want to grow up to become an intelligent human being? Or do I continue to fill my face at every available opportunity until I explode?

Patrick Cahill (Mr. Basford)

C⁺

As the oldest in the class, Patrick could have assumed a natural leadership and set a good example. He seems to prefer to spend his time gyrating at the back with his finger firmly rooted up his nose.

Disappointed.

Layla Amir-Soleymani (Ms. Parry)

B-

It has been another uphill struggle with Layla this term. It doesn't seem to matter how many times she is politely asked to stop crafting papier-mâché genitalia in class, her obscene collection keeps on growing. The only positive note is that she has achieved a real craft in her sculpturing technique of late.

Greg Milward (Mr. Nixon)

D-

The class joker. Mr Nixon needs to think long and hard about his future over the holidays. We would advise him to bear in mind one thing in particular: There is nothing funny about pulling one's trousers up around one's nipples. Nothing.